Non-ischemic cardiomyopathies are the major indication for heart transplantation or mechanical circulatory support. Although cardiomyopathies are a heterogenous disease, the molecular etiology of heart transplantation candidates remains in the vast majority of cases unknown. The presentation will focus on molecular disease mechanisms and the results and consequences of molecular genetics in severe cases of cardiomyopathies.