CSLB : The Cardiology Science Lunch Berlin – a weekly exchange of insights and ideas in cardiovascular medicine

The Cardiology Science Lunch aims to promote scientific exchange between translational and clinical researchers. Nested within the premises of the Campus Virchow Clinic, the weekly meeting offers a platform for discussion to experimental and clinical scientists in the cardiovascular field from Charité, German Heart Center Berlin, Max-Dellbrück Center and research-undertaking or research-applying partner organisations. In addition, external keynote speakers with long-standing expertise in their respective field are invited on a regular basis. The chosen informal format of the meeting is meant to encourage interaction between speaker and attendees. Presentations include a wide range of topics in experimental pathophysiology and clinical cardiovascular science with emphasis on heart failure and arrhythmias. As the majority of attendees are (also) working as clinicians translational aspects and potential clinical impact and implications are addressed as appropriate.

The Cardiology Science Lunch Berlin is sponsored by an educational grant from Servier Deutschland GmbH.
