

Using copyright-protected figures in a dissertation or habilitation

Figures from your own publications

You can reuse these if they have been published under a Creative Commons Open Access license or if the Copyright Transfer Agreement with the publisher grants you the right to reuse the figures in other publications. Since Copyright law is complex, you should check your author contract and contact the publisher if in doubt.

Figures from publications that are not your own

Permission for reuse in a thesis is normally granted free of charge via a simple process:

Look up the article on the publisher's website. At the beginning or the end of the article there is usually a link to „Rights and Permissions“ or „Request Permissions“

This link takes you to the RightsLink Copyright Clearance Center, where you need to select which kind of publication you want to reuse the figure in, e.g. „reuse in a dissertation/thesis or habilitation“.

Once you have made your selection, you are taken to a menu asking further details about the desired reuse. The fees for each are then indicated:

A screenshot of the 'Quick Price Estimate' form on the RightsLink website. The form contains several dropdown menus and input fields. The 'I would like to...' dropdown is set to 'reuse in a dissertation/thesis'. Other dropdowns include 'I am a/an...' (academic/university or research institute), 'My format is...' (print and electronic), 'I would like to use...' (figures/tables/illustrations), 'Circulation/distribution' (1-29), 'Are you the author of this Springer Nature content?' (no), 'I will be translating...' (no), and 'My currency is...' (EUR - €). The 'Number of figures/tables' is set to 1, and 'High-res required' is set to no. The 'Quick Price' is displayed as 0.00 EUR. At the bottom right, there are 'QUICK PRICE' and 'CONTINUE' buttons.

Next, you are required to register with RightsLink. After that, you will be asked to provide further details about your planned dissertation, before an order is generated. At the end you will receive an e-mail with the license to reuse. Please note that it is only valid for reuse in your dissertation/habilitation.

If the publisher does not provide an automatic system for obtaining permission, you can apply by e-mail, e.g. using the following wording:

Dear <Name of the person responsible for copyright matters, or (if not apparent) the journal editor>

I am currently completing my doctoral/postdoctoral thesis at the Charité University Medicine, Berlin, Germany and would hereby like to kindly request permission to reproduce Figure(s) <X,Y,Z> from the following paper: <Autors, year, title, volume, page numbers/doi – or the respective information for a book chapter>.

The title of my thesis is <Title>, <X> copies will be printed and it is standard practice of the Charité University Medicine to make all dissertations/habilitations available online via their repository.

I would be grateful if you could confirm that you own the copyright to this article and let me know whether <name of the publisher> grants permission to re-use material for dissertations/habilitations. If so, is there a fee for re-use in this case?

Thank you very much for your assistance etc etc
